

Sexuality & Disability Webliography

May 29, 2002

Compiled by Janet Freeman

Wellness & Disability Initiative/AIDS & Disability Action Program
BC Coalition of People with Disabilities

Purpose of This Webliography:

To help meet the sex education needs of individuals with disabilities, their carers, and professionals with an interest in the topic.

To provide readers with easily accessible information, in a variety of formats, including plain language.

Note Regarding Use of This Webliography:

In general, entries were selected based on the following 'credibility' criteria:

1. not for profit status (with the exception of book publishers)
2. located on a website sponsored by an organization or institution.

A few personal (ie. the work of a single individual) websites are included based on the amount of useful material offered on their sites. However, many sites contain links to 'for profit' sex toys, prostitution, dating services and what some may consider to be pornography. As with any internet searching, this is a case of 'reader beware'.

Developmental Disability

[Note re terms used: "Learning difficulties is the preferred term in Great Britain for what was previously known as mental handicap. In an international context it can be used interchangeably with developmental disabilities (mental retardation) or intellectual impairment." [McCarthy, Michelle. "Sexual Experiences Of Women With Learning Difficulties In Long-Stay Hospitals. Sexuality and Disability (1993) 11(4):277-286]. In North America, the term learning disability refers to more specific conditions such as dyslexia and attention deficit disorder rather than developmental disability.]
